

Che Guevara

Ché Guevara was a philosopher! Maybe the famous meeting of Jean Paul Sartre and Ché Guevara when the Revolution triumphed has had an influence on this image of the famous martyr of the Americas, that we were used to see as the "Guerrillero Heróico" (Heroic Guerrilla) Nevertheless, Camilo Guevara, the second youngest of his sons and Aleida March, his widow, insist in this vision of Che. And in order to convince the public opinion, they have just created in Havana, in the house where the Hero once lived with his family, the "Ché Guevara" Study Center. This Center has in its archives works written by or about Ché. It is also a cultural center with an art gallery, workshops for children (photography, computing...) and a court for performances of well-known musicians. For the visitors, it will be an occasion to "philosophize" on the subject of Ché's life and, most of all, to bring his role up to date in history, as well as his influence in the Americas and the consequences, still visible nowadays in the politics of the "new continent".

Cuba Autrement organizes on this same subject its program Nature & Culture that makes live again the first days of the Cuban Revolution:
