

Casa Dupont

Varadero, as a beach resort is the work of Irénée Dupont de Nemours, the American multimillionaire. He came to settle in his residence here in the thirties, in the middle of unexploited and wild scenery that offered this peninsula at that time. He built in half of these lands in order to attract the investors and materialize this way his visionary plan for the most beautiful beach of the Caribbean region. His residence, the Mansión Xanadú, remains intact and welcomes the traveler, who can have dinner and sleep there a little bit. It is not really luxurious but a familiar atmosphere is immediately created thanks to the nice staff and the "guests" accommodated in the five rooms available and the suite, the former room of Irénée. The beach, on the rock side, bathes the residence to the north, and the Golf course, the only one in Cuba, serves as the garden to the south. The players can enjoy the Green without limits when their accommodation spot is the Mansion.
