

Hotel Nacional

Declared National Monument, the imposing architecture of the National Hotel faces the sea and the Malecón seafront avenue on the top of a hill where long canons were placed during the Spanish colonization period. They "welcomed" the French, English and Dutch pirates and corsairs that arrived to the bay of Havana. Since the thirties, the National Hotel has accommodated celebrities like Josephine Baker, the American upper crust until now. You can still cross in its lobby Tom Cruise, Schwarzenegger, and Spielberg. Its walls have seen once all the members of the mafia of the United States.

Today, the National Hotel keeps its "old charm". Its different facilities are very nice: conference rooms, restaurants, gardens, lobby, cabaret, bars, but its rooms do not have the international standards of a 5 stars hotel! You have to take this hotel like the "grandfather" it is, full of anecdotes of the rich past of Havana, and make an effort to imagine its old times, but you will have to accept its uncertain comfort and its services, slightly awkward, that are finally added to this Hollywood-style folklore.
